

Risk Disclosure Statement WeTrade Capital Limited

This brief statement does not exhaustively disclose all the risks and significant issues associated with trading foreign exchange contracts.

In light of these risks, clients should only proceed if they fully understand the nature of the contract, the contractual relationship they are entering, and the degree of risk involved. Trading in foreign exchange contracts may not be suitable for all clients.

Clients should carefully consider whether such transactions are appropriate for them in view of their experience, purpose, financial resources, and other relevant circumstances.

Foreign exchange contracts are inherently high-risk. The initial margin requirement is very low relative to the value of the foreign exchange contract, rendering it a leveraged transaction. Consequently, relatively small market fluctuations can have a proportionately greater impact on the funds that clients have or need to deposit.

Such fluctuations may move in a direction that is not favourable to the client. Clients may completely lose the initial margin funds and any other funds deposited with the company to maintain their positions. Placing conditional orders such as "stop loss" or "limit order" may not necessarily limit the client's loss to the expected amount, especially under volatile market conditions, as market circumstances may render the execution of such orders impossible.

Utilising combined position strategies, such as "arbitrage" positions, can be as unsafe as maintaining simple "long" or "short" positions.

Clients should have a clear understanding of all charges they may incur before commencing trading. These charges will affect the client's net profit (if any) or increase the client's loss.

Electronic Transactions: Trading through an electronic trading system differs not only from the open outcry market but also from other electronic trading systems. Clients engaging in transactions via an electronic trading system will face risks related to the electronic system, including potential hardware and software failures. As a result of such failures, a client's order may not be executed according to their instructions or at all.

Clients accept any trading system provided by WeTrade, according to the "original condition." WeTrade does not provide express or implied warranties, including but not limited to implied warranties of merchantability or fitness for particular purposes; timeliness; uninterrupted performance; or any implied warranties arising from trade usage, course of dealing, or course of performance. Under no circumstances will WeTrade be liable for any punitive, indirect, incidental, special, or consequential damages, including loss of business, profits, or goodwill.

WeTrade will not be liable for any delay or interruption of service or delivery due to any cause (including but not limited to hardware or software failure; regulatory measures; natural disasters; war, terrorism, or our deliberate actions) or the inability of WeTrade or its affiliate systems to perform.

Clients acknowledge that there may be delays or interruptions in using our system, including, for example, intentional delays or interruptions by WeTrade for system maintenance purposes. WeTrade does not guarantee that alternative trading arrangements will be provided at a specific time, and WeTrade is not responsible for delays in placing orders. WeTrade's margin policy requires that clients' accounts maintain appropriate margin levels at all times. Failure to meet margin requirements may result in the closure of any existing positions and the incurrence of losses. If an account's margin falls below the minimum margin requirement stipulated by WeTrade's margin call policy, WeTrade reserves the right to close all positions without notice.

In the event of price errors (including but not limited to WeTrade quotation entry errors, quotations not representing fair market prices, or quotations provided by WeTrade employees, including incorrect large number quotations or inaccuracies due to hardware, software, communication lines, or systems and/or external data sources provided by third-party suppliers), WeTrade will not be responsible for account balance errors. The above-listed circumstances are not exhaustive. In cases of incorrect pricing, WeTrade reserves the right to make necessary corrections or adjustments to the affected accounts. If there is a system error and interest is not collected or paid as planned, WeTrade reserves the right to transfer the missing interest in or out of the account at any time.

If a client grants a third-party trading advisor (such as a fund manager) the authority to trade or control their account, whether fully or partially, WeTrade will not be responsible for reviewing the client's selection of a trading advisor or making any recommendations in this regard. WeTrade makes no representations or warranties regarding any trading advisor and is not responsible for any losses that may result from the trading advisor's actions. Moreover, WeTrade does not endorse or approve the methods employed by any trading advisor.

If clients authorise a fund manager to exercise any rights over their accounts, they do so at their own risk. Clients should regularly review their account activity to ensure that their money manager conducts transactions on their behalf with their approval. Transactions sometimes face severely volatile market conditions. For example, the release of key news may expose clients to additional risks, including the risk that clients may not obtain their requested price.

In highly volatile markets, WeTrade cannot guarantee specific pricing for any client. Simulated conditions may differ from real conditions. Therefore, clients who conduct transactions on simulated accounts should not assume that the same results will necessarily occur in real transactions.